After the great welcome of their two first releases, Paradigma Musik works endlessly on new tracks from some of the most promising producers worldwide. This is the case of Anthony Collins, a French artist who although being only twenty-three years old, gathers an amazing background in labels such as Players Paradise, Criminal Rec. (both within his parallel project Vibe Dealers) or Infant.

Now he settles down in Paradigma with this "Pop-off E.P.", which means another style turnaround for Paradigma Musik, the third one, that shows again their wish not to be stuck in any specific sound. The track that names the maxi bets on digital house, full of melody and with minimal cadenza, showing that repetitive rhythms don't have to be cold at all. This fact is confirmed by Ludovic Vendi's remix, another French fellow who we all know from his superb maxis with Dialect, Gourmet or Was Kids. Vendi contributes with more strength and hypnotism to the melody, giving more dance floor consistency.

The next two tracks completing this release are: "Chocopistache", launched as a more introspective, melodic and evocative track. Perfect to end sessions or to start a long set full of vanguard sounds. "Face It", dancefloor-focused and intimate, we believe it is going to be ideal for dj's who go one step beyond when choosing their vinyls, always with a fair ratio between quality and quantity. Just like Paradigma.

Anthony Collins is Paradigma's future gamble. Marc Marzenit and Paul Ritch were the first ones, the list keeps growing up, so does Paradigma...
